Primary Research Objectives

- Identify barriers to housing and how commonly they are being experienced
- Measure awareness of fair housing laws in the region
- Determine prevalence of experience with housing discrimination
- Examine lack of housing choice by protected classes

Methodology

- Survey invitation was sent by email to the Opt In panel (hosted by Decipher), of approx. 17,000 valid email addresses, on March 8-9. A reminder was sent March 16. The survey closed June 9. Opt In panel members completed 2,607 of the completed surveys.
- An open link to the survey was also made available to non-panel members, including but not limited to: Portland Housing Bureau's direct email contact list; the federal grant managers in each Metro jurisdiction; Home Forward; the Community Alliance of Tenants; 211info. 847 responses were completed by individuals who were not panel members.
  - The online survey took a median time of 23 minutes to complete.
- Lastly, people were invited to complete the survey in small focus groups. Eight of the focus groups were language specific and included one to two interpreters and written aides in the language of the focus group. 98 surveys were completed by focus group attendees.
- After quality checks and data cleaning, a total of 3,552 surveys were analyzed in this research process.

Executive Summary

Executive Summary (1 of 3)

- 76% of homeowners like their current housing very much. In contrast, 36% of renters like their housing very much, while 46% say they like it somewhat or it's okay.
- 36% of respondents want to move into new housing , and 11% don't want to but think they will have to in the near future.
- Affordability is the most important factor when looking for new housing. 53% of those who are planning to move, want to move, or might have to move say that are having problems finding housing they can afford. 10% of those looking for housing mention (unprompted in an open-ended response) that they think there is a high demand and/or low supply of housing in the region.
- The biggest problems for residents include the affordability of housing, rent, repairs to their home, and bills. Traffic near their home is also rated as a problem, as is the physical quality of their home.

Executive Summary (2 of 3)

- 23% of respondents say they don't know how to find information the need in order to find a new place to live that meets their needs.
- 10% of respondents say that in the last five years, their housing was unhealthy due to mold, disrepair, toxins, or other hazards. This problem was reported at a higher rate among respondents of color, those with kids, and those with a disability.
- 16% can remember a time when they've been denied housing to rent or buy in the Metro area. About two-thirds of them say this has happened in the past 5 years. The most common reason for this was income-related, followed by credit issues. Most of these people were denied rental housing. These denials were reported at a higher rate among those with non-binary genders, unmarried people, women, households with kids, and those who do not practice a religion.

Executive Summary (3 of 3)

- When it comes to feeling as if or suspecting they've been treated differently and discouraged from renting, owning, or enjoying their housing, 34% report they've experiencing this in the Metro area. The most common reasons were because of their amount of income, credit history, or their pets.
- 16% of respondents say they have had to move against their wishes in the last five years. Groups reporting this at a higher rate include people of color, disabled people, unmarrieds, and those with a non-traditional income. The most common reasons were that rent increased or their rental house was sold by the owner, but 16% of those who moved against their wishes (or 3% of the total dataset) say they were evicted without cause.

Age Groups Represented

Q45: Which of the following age ranges includes your age?
(n=3,419)

Data Weighting Explained (1 of 2)

- The data collected from this survey is intended to represent the population of the tri-county area: 1,274,917 people, living in 662,419 households. We have 3,552 people represented by our data. This means that each person surveyed is representing about 359 people in the tri-county area.
- However, because our survey data is not perfectly random, it is to be expected that some groups might be under- or over-represented, making results skew towards the views of the more over-represented groups (35-54-year-olds for one example). On the other hand, 18 to 34 year olds are being under-represented, for example, and their opinions are not being shown as strongly in the data. The actual percentage of 18 to 34 year olds in Portland is about 32%, but in the survey only 17% of the people in Portland are between falls in this age range. After weighting, that percentage of that youngest age group is closer to reality at 30%.

Data Weighting Explained (2 of 2)

- What weighting allows us to do is to make sure that instead of each person representing 359 people from the total population of the tri-county area, each person who took the survey is representing the population from its group only. The group was defined by their age, homeowner status, and whether or not they live in Portland. If the group is over-represented in the survey then each person will count for fewer than this 359 people, and if the group is under-represented then each person will count for more than the 359 people. This is done to more accurately reflect the actual population of the tri-county area.
- The weighting we did for this project adjusts for distribution of population in Portland and those outside of Portland, for age, and for homeowner-occupied households and renter-occupied households.
